In writing this thesis, special thanks must go to Prof. Munro Price and Dr. Gábor Bátonyi for their continued help, advice and support. I am also greatly indebted to Jack Morrell whose assistance was invaluable in the scientific aspect of the topic. The time he gave to read my work has been greatly appreciated. Thank you to Dr. Jeff Hughes from Manchester University who provided me with useful information on the MAUD Committee. Also, many thanks to the archivists Sandra Marsh and Katherine Thomson at the Churchill Archives Centre in Cambridge who helped me locate the primary documents on James Chadwick, John Cockcroft and G.P Thomson. The National Archives at Kew were also invaluable in locating the documents on Lord Cherwell's role in Britain's early atomic research as well as the security files on Klaus Fuchs and the negotiations for the Quebec Agreement. Last but not least, thank you to Mr. Stephen Gorman for keeping this researcher mobile.
