

Acknowledgements

I wish to acknowledge those individuals, institutions and funding bodies that have facilitated the successful completion of this research project. Firstly I wish to thank Julie Bond (University of Bradford), Ingrid Mainland (Orkney College) and Steve Dockrill (University of Bradford) for their academic guidance. Secondly, I would like to acknowledge those bodies whose provision of funding has made this work possible, namely, the Division of AGES (University of Bradford), the Andy Jagger Fund (University of Bradford), the Francis Raymond Hudson Fund (University of Bradford), the Viking Society, the Prehistoric Society, SYNTHESIS and the Paddy Coker Research Fund (Biogeographical Society). For donations of data I would like to thank Julie Bond (University of Bradford), Ingrid Mainland (Orkney College), Tom McGovern (City University New York), Jen Harland (University of York), Finbar McCormick (Queens University Belfast), Jacqui Mulville (Cardiff University), Judith Aird, Georg Nyegaard (National Museum of Greenland), George Hambrecht (City University New York), Inge Bødker Enghoff (Zoological Museum, University of Copenhagen) and Seth Brewington (City University New York). For granting access to archaeozoological collections I wish to express my gratitude to Kim Aris-Sørensen (Zoological Museum, University of Copenhagen) and Anne Brundle (Orkney Museum). For the provision of figures my thanks goes to Dan Bashford (Oxford Archaeology) and Mike Cussans. For their time, encouragement and invaluable insights I would like to thank Tom McGovern (City University New York), Jette Arneborg (National Museum of Denmark), Terry O'Connor (University of York), Agnes Leask, Ramona Harrison (City University New York), Peter Popkin (English Heritage), Poly Baker (English Heritage) and Fay Worley

(English Heritage). For so diligently proof reading this thesis and for an endless supply of food and fun my heartfelt thanks go to Zoe Outram (University of Bradford), Jo McKenzie (University of Bradford) and Antony Mustchin (University of Bradford). A huge debt of gratitude is also owed to Hannah Russ (University of Bradford), Jen Wooding (University of Bradford), John Summers (University of Bradford), Naomi Sewpaul (University of Bradford), everyone in the North Atlantic Research Unit (University of Bradford), Antony Mustchin (University of Bradford) and my parents, Liz and Mike Cussans for their friendship, love and emotional support. Last but by no means least I would like to thank Nicola Mahut and John Isner for inspiration never to give up and Jasper Fforde whose literary genius and witticism has helped to keep me sane.